But may not this very confideration make it reafonable to enquire, If lo much has been laid and wrote on the fubjeei: already, what need is there to fay or write any more I anfwe r, there are no inconfiderable numbers, even of people fearing God, who have not had the opportunity either of hearing what has been fpoke. Or read mg what has been wrote upon it. And perhaps if they had read much of what has been written, they would not have been much profited. Lvlany who have wrote (forne of them large volumes) do by no means appear to have under?ood the fubjee t. Either they had 1mpe1fe9[views of the very nature of 11 (and then they could net (1 ex plain it to others) or they were unacquainted with the due extent of it they did ndt fee how exceeding head this command is. Or they were not fenfible of the abfolute, the indifpenfable me oelhty of it. Others {peak of it in lo...
